It's good to be back!

There has been a greater-than-usual sense of celebration, and not a little relief, at the start of this Michaelmas term, as Freshers and returning students crowded for the new academic year, and more social life came back into College after months of home working, lockdown, isolation, and, more recently, affected by the pandemic, but (at least) it has been known to ‘somewhat’ start September.

Among the usual round of Freshers’ events, there was a ‘Birthday’ dinner for last year’s Freshers, who missed out on Freshers’ events, while other events so far this term have included talks and exhibitions. For Black History Month, a service for All Saints’ day, that commemorated all members of College who died in the last year, and Diwali celebrations.

G20 people’s climate vote

A poll of hundreds of thousands of people, led by Stephen Fisher Fellow and Tutor in Politics, shows public demand for climate action.

The report was published last month by the UN Development Programme (UNDP) in the United Nations. Some 70 per cent of under-18s surveyed subscribe to that view, along with 60 per cent of adults. The survey covered 18 of G20 member countries, and polled over 490,000 people.

Forthcoming events

Trinity Tomes

Join us for the final two talks of this term (see above): Writing a War of Words Lynda Mugglestone, Lecturer in English Language — This is your chance to hear from Trinity authors and discuss their work.

We have enjoyed four sessions in the Trinity Tomes series so far this term and the recordings can all be seen on the college YouTube platform. There is still time to book for the final two events.

Writing a War of Words

By Linda Mugglestone, Lecturer in English Language, is one of the exploration of the wartime quest by Andrew Clark—writer, historian, and volunteer on the first edition of the Oxford English Dictionary— to document changes in the English language.

The report was published last month by the UN Development Programme (UNDP) in the United Nations. Some 70 per cent of under-18s surveyed subscribe to that view, along with 60 per cent of adults. The survey covered 18 of G20 member countries, and polled over 490,000 people.

Virtual Beer Tasting

Join us for a tour of Westerham Brewery from Robert Wicks (1983) and taste six different beers from the collection.

Friday 3 December - Book now

Virtual Beer Tasting

Join us for an appearance of over 689,000 people.
